There is a growing attention in Italy and in the rest of Europe on the strategic use of public procurement to purchase works, goods or services to promote a sustainable, innovative and inclusive growth. The question is key for the future of Europe, given that public procurement accounts for about 19% of GDP in the EU.

This workshop aims to provide a wide but focused discussion on such strategic use of public procurement, in the light of the new tools and challenges introduced by the new European Directive on Public Procurement. The workshop will discuss the main economic, legal and institutional issues in Italy and in the rest of Europe, and make suggestions towards their resolution.
